NEW JERSEY JUDICIARY. The County Elective Act Declared Uncon-stitutions1. Trenton, N. J., Sept. 9 .- The county judiciary law was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court this morning. Judge Van Syckle filed a long opinion, of which the following is the sylla-

First-The legislature may reduce the number of judges of the court of common pleas to any number less than five. and may prescribe the qualifications of the judges

Second-The legislature cannot abolish the court of common pleas; but if it Island last week. Miss Lucy Bishop is conceded that it has such power, then, so long as the jurisdiction which resides in that court is exercised for the benefit of the people, it must be exercised by judges appointed as heretofore. It cannot be bodily transferred to be exercised Warner. by judges not appointed as the constitution prescribes

Third-The legislature cannot, by adding to or subtracting from the duties of a given office, by uniting one office to another, acquire the right to appoint the officer in a manner other than that prescribed by the supreme law.

Fourth-The act of June 13,1895,known as the county court law, is unconstitutional.

The opinion, which is written by Judge Van Syckle, has these words written at the end of the document: "Justice Lippincott concurs in this opinion; Justice Magie will express his own views." The case came before Judges Van Syckle, Lippincott and Magle of the supreme court on mandamus proceedings brought by Lay Judge Shalk of Essex county against James T. Wrightson of the same county, to have the latter restrained from having printed on the official ballots this fall the names of the county judges who would be nominated in pursuance of the law which sought to abolish the present court of common pleas with their appointive law and lay judges, and provide for elective county judges to take their places. The supreme court judge recently announced that no decision of the case would be rendered until after election, but public opinion was so pronounced against the delay that they seem to have set to

Judge Van Syckle in his opinion said that the Engelman case, upon which the counsel opposing Judge Shalk's suit laid so much stress, did not in any way involve the question of the constitutionality of the court of common pleas, but only bore on the constitutionality of the act of 1855, which empowered a supreme court judge to sit in the court of quarter sessions. He said that there was no question that the court of common pleas may be altered in two respects, namely: First, as to the number of its judges, and, secondly, as to the qualifications of those judges. admitted," he said, "that the legislature may extinguish that court whenever, in its discretion, it deems that the public good requires it to be abolished; yet, in my judgment, so long as the court is substantially in existence, the provis-ions of the constitution that 'judges of the inferior court of common pleas shall be nominated by the governor and appointed by him, with the advice and consent of the senate,' stands as an insurmountable barrier to the election of these judges by the people or to their appointment in any other way than that thus prescribed. The question, therefore, to be determined is whether, according to the rule to be applied to the Interpretation of the constitution, the court of common pleas has been constitutionally abolished by the county court Judge Van Syckle then quotes a decision of the New York court of appeals in the case of Warren vs. the People, in successful, as usual, in his venture. which it was held that, where the con stitution provides for the appointment to an office in a particular manner, the legislature has no power to create a new office for the performance of the same or the principal part of the same duties, and to direct the appointment to be made in another manner. He also quoted the case of the People vs, Draper, in which the New York court of appeals held that "it is not enough to take the case out of this provision of the constitution, that the names of the office existing when the constitution was adopted are afterwards changed by an act of the legislature, or that their functions are colorably modified. The constitution regards substance and not

TWO SWINDLERS

Touched Mr. Gay of Hotel Majestic for About $100 and Then Skipped-Claimed to Represent Two Big Breweries

Last Wednesday two men giving the ames of Val Blatz and William Wenz Milwaukee registered at the Hotel Majestle, Blazz purporting to be a representative of the Blatz Brewing company, while Wenz claimed to be an agent of the Pabst Brewing company. They secured the best rooms obtainable in the hotel, and said that they intended to stay some time. They stated that their business in New Haven was to advertise the two beers and to build cold storage house on Meadow street for the two beers.

On Saturday, claiming to have run short of money, they asked for an advance from Mr. Gay, and he granted the request to the extent of, it is said $25. They also presented a check to be cashed amounting to $75 on which Mr Gay advanced the money. The check had been found to be worthless. Saturday night the men left the hotel and did not return. When their room was opened Sunday morning an empty sult case was found, and the plans of the proposed cold storage house, these be ing the only effects found. Henry A. Paliman, who the men said had purchased the Meadow street property for them, says that he has never seen the nen and knew nothing of them until called upon by Detective Reilly. The police of meighboring towns have been notified to be on the lokout for the swindlers. Blatz was about forty years old, while Wenz appeared to be about twenty-six.
